

California Consumer Privacy Act Recordkeeping

Fox News Network, LLC's ("Company's") California Consumer Privacy Act ("CCPA") metrics for the 2020 reporting period are as follows:

Requests to Know: Company received 100 requests from individuals identifying as California residents to access their personal for the 2020 reporting period through its designated methods of submission. Of those requests, Company complied, in whole or in part, with 42 requests. Company denied 58 requests due to failure to verify identity. The median number of days within which Company substantively responded to requests to know was 20.

Requests for Deletion: Company received 314 requests from individuals identifying as California residents to delete their personal information for the 2020 reporting period through its designated methods of submission. Of those requests, Company complied, in whole or in part, with 19 requests. As permitted by the CCPA, Company uses a two-step process for online requests to delete. Company denied 295 requests due to failure to verify identity or failure to separately confirm that they wanted their personal information deleted, as permitted by the CCPA. The median number of days within which Company substantively responded to requests to delete was 12.

Requests to Opt Out of "Sales": Company shares some categories of personal information in connection with certain types of advertisements, which could be considered a "sale" under the CCPA. Company provides a Do Not Sell My Personal Information link on its websites and a Do Not Sell My Personal Information section in the Account/Settings sections of its digital apps. Company received an estimated 106,663 requests to opt out of "sales" of personal information for the 2020 reporting period through those mechanisms. In connection with these opt-outs, Company does not inquire as to whether the individual is a California resident. Accordingly, the number of opt-out requests likely includes both Californian and non-California individuals. Company complied with all of those requests. Because opt-outs are processed on an automated basis, the median number of days within which Company substantively responded to requests to opt-out was one day.
